Allergen-free diets are common in vegetarian, vegan, and health conscious eaters. This review assesses the methods and analyses of food allergens, many of which are of significant magnitude in food products. Probiotic bacteria and probiotic products are commonly used as functional foods. Pathogenic bacteria and toxins are commonly associated with probiotic bacteria. Finally, methodologies for analysis of food products are described.PROJECT SUMMARY/ABSTRACT The objective of this research proposal is to investigate the key elements of nitrate aerosol (NO_3 - aerosol) delivery in the respiratory tract to determine the dose of inhaled NO_3 - aerosol that achieves maximal effects on gas exchange, blood oxygenation, and pulmonary vascular tone. We will assess multiple NO_3 - aerosol delivery techniques in awake sheep in order to determine the key elements of delivery that will maximize the desired responses. Using pharmacological interventions (selective antagonists) and the technique of multibreath washout, we will investigate key elements of NO_3 - aerosol delivery including the optimal geometry, frequency and flow rate. In combination with these techniques, we will investigate key pulmonary vascular mediators including nitric oxide (NO), prostaglandins, and endothelium-derived hyperpolarizing factor (EDHF) that may contribute to the pulmonary vascular response to NO_3 - aerosol. Pharmacological and functional studies will be performed before and after endothelium removal in order to investigate the contribution of NO and EDHF to the pulmonary vasod
